Explanation of the Leaving of Shmunguss

As many of you may know, our old owner (theshmunguss1) left and no one knows why, but we do. It started with good ol' Cayson Williams a.k.a The Dipsh*t making about 9 alt accounts on Slack and after a while telling TheShmunguss1 to “KYS” (Kill Your Self) And well we said something to the principal and had to shut down we did this again when he did some other stuff but we won't get into that all, and all of this was a lot on Zach and I. This stress brought about his resignation.

The Recap

The beginning of 2023 was sort of the beginning of Ram Networks. With all of the updates and the Google Site coming soon after, we've won two wars, made a lot of partners, and even became a part of Glitchquake for a short while. We've been taken down and put back up on both the site and the doc, and grown each time. Even with theshmunguss1 leaving, we will not back down! We will stay strong.

Conclusion (by theshmunguss1)

We really thank you all for such a wonderful year at Ram Networks. And, the next newsletter will be released next year! We know that this one was quite short but we hope that you have yourself a merry little Christmas. Did you know that this is the last newsletter that I will write? And, these last few sentences that I have written marks a new legacy. It marks this wonderful journey we've made, from beginning to end. From low-ranked to one of the best. These last few sentences represent not just a new legacy, but a new year. A year where we will rise up. A year where we will be great. When I first started Ram Networks, I never expected it to be this large. It was tiny at first, only a few people in my school ever knew about it. And, two of those people will make a difference in the future of Ram Networks as they take the role of co-owner and owner.

Thank you all for what you've done.

-theshmunguss1, former owner

Goodbye.
